

According to data published by Interfax with reference to Izvestia, the Russian authorities this week may announce the resumption of air links with the following countries: France, Hungary, Malta, Cyprus, Jordan, Egypt (only Cairo) and China (only Shanghai).

If this happens, flights with EU countries will be open to a limited number of passengers, due to the fact that the EU still does not open borders for Russians.

Information about the resumption of air traffic at the moment has not been confirmed by the competent authorities.
